Students in Public Schools are Failing at Virtual Learning – A Wet Dream for Libertarians

tonyodarg.wordpress.com/2020/10/24/students-in-public-schools-are-failing-at-virtual-learning-a-wet-dream-for-libertarians

Tony Odarg October 24, 2020

Libertarianism taken to its logical conclusion means the state is evil and must be abolished. Most libertarians don't get that far to complete the logic, but most oppose social services run by the government through taxes. Such is the case with public schools. And yet, when students are forced to be at home, sometimes without supervision, to complete assignments that teachers give them virtually, this is what happens (from Texas Tribune):

> Report cards from the first weeks of the school year show more students than last year failing at least one class. Students are turning in assignments late, if at all; skipping days to weeks of virtual school; and falling behind on reading, educators and parents report. Many parents say they're exhausted from playing the role of at-home teacher, and some students without support at home are struggling to keep track of their daily workload with limited outside help.

In other words, you can't just end society and expect average Joe to pick up the pieces. Human beings don't only rely one another but also on the infrastructure that is in place. It's called civilization and we built it for a reason.

Links

My thread: https://twitter.com/realsickofthis/status/1319983558006538240
Archive: https://archive.vn/WpDv1

Tribune: https://www.texastribune.org/2020/10/23/texas-students-remote-learning-failing-schools/
Archive: https://archive.vn/veipy

Thread: https://twitter.com/AliyyaSwaby/status/1319673806529712130
Archive: https://archive.vn/G0iBx